Facts

Jarle, Thorsten and Roberto founded Dust&Bones in 2000 in the Swabian diaspora. Their motto: Let's have fun and make some dirty noise!

The sound of Dust&Bones is unfussy, sometimes metal, sometimes rock, based on classic hardrock grooves. Garnished with a drop down guitar sound and the fun, the guys have in their dusty bones.

The first 6-track-demo ("for promotional use only") was released in fall 2000 and garnered a lot of good reviews. After some gigs (with Postmortem, Cockroach, among others) Jens joined the band in summer 2002. In fall 2003 Dust&Bones entered the studio Gerassipark (Crematory etc.) to record six new songs. They were released in 2004. A couple of month later the German label MetalAxe-Records signed Dust&Bones to release their official debut.

LIBERATOR (with Bernd Biedenbach on lead guitar) saw the light of day in July 2005. The band toured a lot, for example with Onkel Tom (Angelripper; leadsinger of Sodom). After some line-up changes (Roberto left, guitarist Tucke joins, Thorsten switsches from guitar to bass) Dust&Bones were ready for a new adventure.

In late 2008 they entered the 141 studio of Roger Grüninger (Undertow, Hackneyed) to record some new dirty hymns. The result are 666 NEUROTIC BOMBS. With their new launching base Firefield Records Dust&Bones are now ready to explode!
